Local Rates, Rate Books and poor rate

The first poor rate was imposed by an act of 1597-1598. However this was re-enacted in the 1601 Act for the Relief of the Poor that introduced compulsory rating throughout the country. Rate books were compiled in order to keep a record of each person's assessment and whether or not it had been paid. However it is rare to find a complete series of rate books surviving from the 17th century. An Act of Parliament of 1744 gave residents the right to inspect rate books.

The Old Poor Law (1601 Act)

The Poor Law was established by Acts of 1597 and 1601, and placed responsibility for the poor firmly in the hands of the parish. The 1601 Act ordered the appointment of overseers of the poor and their accounts often show payments made to the poor. Funds were derived mainly from the poor rate.

Once the principle of compulsory rating had been adopted it was used to raise money for all sorts of purposes besides the relief of the poor. These included repair and maintenance of highways, bridges, gaols, sewers, and general improvements. Compulsory church rates were used to raise money for the upkeep of the fabric of the church and were finally abolished in 1868 when Gladstone's Compulsory Church Rates Abolition Bill was passed but they could still be levied on a voluntary basis.

In the 19th century, various Acts of Parliament were passed to enable rates to be imposed for works which would benefit the community, without first taking the matter through Parliament, for example the Museum Act 1845, the Baths and Wash-houses Act 1846/7, the Public Libraries Acts 1850 & 1855 and the Recreation Grounds Act 1859. District Councils were formed in 1894, and were given the authority to collect rates from householders in their district.

Gradually the rates became the major source of local authority income. On 1st April 1927 the Rating and Valuation Act (1925) came into force and introduced a new system of levying local taxation. Under the Local Government Act 1929 Boards of Guardians were finally abolished and their powers were transferred to local authorities.

The rate books contain entries for Ash and Normandy mixed together. This list includes all the ones that we believe are in Normandy, but there may be others that we have missed.
